Ever since time began, wars have been waged among men and nations. There have been wars for conquest for territorial expansion for defense of human liberties, for the liberation of the down trodden from the yoke of tyranny and for civil and religious rights and privileges. There have been wars just and unjust. Wars sacred and wars profume. History is the mighty witness of all past deeds of the world, and time alone can built of the wisdom of those deeds and fight. The doors were opened shortly after 5 o'clock, and admission was by ticket. An hour later the auditorium was well Among those occupying seats on the stage, were Mesers, C. W. It has been almost one and one-quarter centuries since the thirteen American colonies struck the first blow for independence. The years that followed that strife have disclosed to us its results—the establishment of a republic which is without a parallel in the history of the human rece. That was not a war for conquest or political supremacy. It was a war in defense of home, country and the secred rights of man as unier, orator of the day; General Appleton, Calonela Gibbona, Hewitt and Berlew, of Governor Atkinson's staff; Rabbi Harry Levi, one of the speakers; Rev. After a wait of nearly an hour the cry went up at 4:04 o'clock that the admiral and party were coming. A minute later cheers were heard on the outside, and the carriages drove up to the Chapline street entrance. The street was packed with a crowd of sev eral thousand people, and it was with difficulty that the police detail could force open a narrow pathway for the admiral and party, but finally this was accomplished, and to the accompaniment of remarkable enthusiasm the party made its way into the auditor-

The appearance of Admira: Dewey accompanied by Governor Atkinson, Flag Lieutenant Caldwell and Mr. Garvin, was the signal for a mighty burst of cheering from the people assembled within the building. ## The Exercises Open.

Without loss of time the exercises were opened, Chairman Brockunier anng that the opening prayer would be by Rev. D. A. Cunningham. In invoking the blessing of Almighty God, Dr. Cunningham said.

We do not cheer them simply because of their heroic deeds, but because of their for which they stood, fought and bled. Civil and religious liberty and the equality of all men before the inw had been inscribed by them on all our institutions. Our national character has been moulded by their principle of life and haw. The freedom of the millions who live and have lived under the American fiagis the widest and highest freedom that civilized man has ever inherited. That liberty has made it possible for man to develop his activities and usefulness without limit or fear of restraint by any sovereign power, and the result is their under this liberty, and protected by its sacred rights, this nation has, in a little more than a hundred years, grown from thirteen struggling colonies to a republic of forty-four states and over seventy millions of people. This unparalleled growth of our union was made possible only by the sacrifices, trials, sufferings and untold hardships of men who welcomed the duty that led them into the very jaws of death to rescue this liberty from the clitches of tyranny. The invisible strength of this nation has been built O Thou Great Jehovah, Thou hast repared Thy throne in the heavens; prepared Thy throne in the heavens; and Thy kingdom ruleth over all. Thou doest according to Thy will in the army of heaven, and smong the inhabitants of the garth; and none can stay Thy hand or say unto Thee, What doest Thou? In all the warfare of the world's history no higher type of courage is found than that exhibited by the revolutionary patriot. What higher devotion do the pages of history witness than that of those who serve their country without pay, wild starvation staring them in the face, enduring the blasts of winter-with but scant clothing, almost without shelter and leaving footprints of blood upon the frozen ground. Such heroism is not surpassed in all the calcular of heroic deeds.

We cannot pass over these events without a feeling of reverence for the memory of him whose name stands out alone on the pages of our nation's his-

When during the siege the powder supply of the fort was almost exhausted; when surrender seemed the only alternative, with death staring in the faces of the occupants of the fort. although each man was ready to risk his life in the effort, a young woman quickly volunteered to go on the perilous mission of securing a suppply of powder from a neighboring building. This mission seemed certain death, for the builders of the enemy were being poured against the fort from every side. She insisted that no man's life could be spared from the fort without weakening it, and that the lose of a woman's life would be of little consequency. With this resolve she ran from the fort to the house where the powder was stored and, quickly securing the powder, she wrapped it in a garment, and, amidst a hail of rifle balls, returned to the fort in safety. Can all history tell of a deed more sublime? But the spirit of one was the spirit of all. Judge Cranmer Accepts.

On behalf of the city, Judge Gibson L. Cranmer, the historian of Wheeling, accepted the tablet. He said:

On behalf of the citizens of Wheeling and the quanty of Chio, on this the natal day of the immortal Washington ing and the quunty of Onio, on this the natal day of the immortal Washington, and in the presence of our distinguished guests, Admiral Deway, Lieutenant Deddridge, our worthy governor and others, I have the honor of accepting at your hands this stone intended to mark the site of Fort Henry, which for more than a century has remained unmarked.

It has been the custom of mankind from the earliest period of the world's history to mark the sites of important places which have played an important part in the case of individuals, communities and nations by the erection of suitable memorials to commemorate their character and influence.

Hence, in the earliest records of which we have any knowledge, we read that when the Israelites in their exodus from Egypt crossed the Jordan they were commanded to place at the scene of their passage twive stones that it might be a sign among them that when the leaved their character in their thick of them.

And, again, when the children of Israel were required to enter into a covenant with the Lord to perpetuate the remembrance of the same Joshua took a great stone and placed it under an oak; near the sanctuary of the Lord, d said, "This shall be a witness to me."

And, again, we read that Jacob reared a pillar to signal that it was on the spot where the Lord appeared to him while he slept upon his pillow of

It will also serve to inspire the young with patriotic emotions, reminding them of the struggles encountered and the trials experienced by the early settlers in their efforts to win an empire from the wilderness and establish a republic.
